

教育研究法研究 Research on Educational Research Methods

This course will prepare graduate students to become knowledgeable consumers of research and become more competent in analyzing the value of various studies and the implications of research for educational practice. A variety of research methods and research studies, such as, but not limited to, experimental and quasi-experimental designs, correlational designs, survey designs, ethnographic designs, narrative research designs, mixed method designs, and action research designs, will be introduced. Students will also have the opportunities to design their own educational research.