

Cognition and Science Learning

The course attempts to make students explore the theories of cognitive psychology and its application in science education. A series of papers will be read in this class. The topics of the papers are about the history of cognitive psychology, brain, memory and cognition, information processing, nature of knowledge, representation and retrieval, problem solving, situated learning, mental model, language and science learning, reading comprehension, writing in science and learning style.